Graduate Conference in Public Law March 26, 2021

The Department of Government at the University of Texas at Austin invites graduate student submissions for the seventh annual Graduate Conference in Public Law, to be held March 26, 2021. As public law has grown in prominence in political science, the conference provides an important forum for early-career scholars to exchange ideas and to engage with common questions in the field. We welcome abstracts on all aspects of public law, including but not limited to:

- American and Comparative Constitutionalism
- Jurisprudence and Judicial Behavior
- Constitutional or Political Development
- Legal Theory, or Political Theory with a Public Law Dimension
- Security and International Law
- Human Rights
- Law and Economic Inequality
- European/EU Law and Courts
- Law and Society
- Constitutional and Statutory Design
- Public Administration

Participants will take turns presenting each other's work and receiving feedback from each other and a faculty discussant. Given the unique circumstances of this year, the conference will be held online.

Please submit long abstracts of up to 1000 words, along with an up-to-date C.V., by December 15, 2020 to utpubliclawconference@gmail.com. Participants should plan to submit final drafts of about 20-30 pages by the end of February 2021.

Questions may be directed to utpubliclawconference@gmail.com.

Student organizers: Maria Paz Avila, Joseph Cozza, Tara Ginnane, Austin Nelson, Nathalia Sandoval, Kyle Shen, and Allen Sumrall (Department of Government)
